

Before the commencement of your air travel, please check that you possess all the valid documents required for travel: passport, air tickets, valid VISA, health certificates, travel insurance, etc. Contact consulate/ airline for further details.

CheckList

- Flights to India are usually booked to capacity so it's recommended to call the airline you are flying on at least 72 hrs prior to departure time and reconfirm your departure with them.
- Photocopy your passport, traveler's cheques, credit cards, itinerary and airline tickets. Carry one copy with you and leave one copy and your overseas contact details with a person in your home city. In case you lose any valuable documents, you'll have a record and know whom to call.
- Carry an international driving license. Even if you're not planning to drive, it serves as a form of identification.
- Put identification tags with your name, address and phone number on all of your baggage. It is advisable to use details of your workplace, if possible.
- Since most Indian airports are rather crowded, plan ahead and pre-arrange transfers, hotel accommodation and other requirements with your travel representative so you'll have one less thing to worry about upon arrival.

Security

- Allow plenty of extra time by being at the airport at least three hours before departure to catch your flight especially if traveling with children or senior citizens.
- You will be required to produce your travel documents at different points through your journey so remember to keep them easily accessible at all times.
- Avoid wearing clothing, jewelry, or other accessories that contain metal when traveling. Be aware that any metal detected at the security checkpoint must be identified. If you set off the alarm, you will be required to undergo a secondary screening, including a pat-down inspection.
- Take your laptop computer out of its carry case and place it in the bin separate from the carrying case.
- Outer coats and jackets must go through the X-ray machine for inspection. Pack these in your carry-on baggage when possible.
- Wear shoes that can be taken off and put back on relatively easily since you will have to remove them every time you go through security inspection.

WISH YOU A HAPPY JOURNEY
